

Full Moon

Jacopo Foggini

General description:

A table in alabaster, lit as the full moon, which reveals its secret geography of ancient signs. It is a slab of millenary stone that is pleasant to caress, the edge is carefully polished, the gaze is captured by its veined, natural surface. The top is obtained by cutting a very thick slice out of the egg-shaped extremely pure matter and every table is unique, as Nature never manifest itself in the same exact way. The translucent stone is supported by a shiny metal pedestal.

Technical description:
